Our programs and services reached nearly a quarter of a million people this year - on average, that's 627 each and every day!

Total Reach: 229, 211

We worked directly with 375 schools and community programs, reaching 44,645 children and youth, and 9,968 teachers and staff.

That's equivalent to all the schools in Edmonton, Lethbridge, and Airdrie combined.

Of the schools we work with deeply, 31% (20/64) are meeting recommendations for health promoting school standard.

When asked how useful our programs and services were to increase participants' capacity, respondents rated EAS' programs an average of 4.4 out of 5 stars (n=443).

We worked with 144 different partners across the health, recreation, research and corporate sectors.

Nearly half of all of our interactions this year supported priority populations (40.6%, total interactions = 1032).

23.4%
of our programs and services support indigenous youth.

5.6%
of our programs and services support newcomer youth.

8.0%
of our programs and services support persons with disabilities.

9.7%
of our programs and services support girls and women.

14.5%
of our programs and services support youth from low income families.

of our programs and services support two-spirit, non-binary, gender and sexually diverse youth.

By attending our events and programs, surveyed participants reported that we helped them to develop or reinforce an average of 9 partners to support their wellness efforts (n=185).

After engaging with us, 98% of surveyed participants were more familiar and comfortable with how to advance well-being in their program or school community (n=377).

Youth who participate in the work we support feel more seen, heard and understood by their peers (62% n=96), and experienced opportunities for increased connections with old and new friends (80% n=101).
